INTRODUCTION

This is the ninth annual edition of the Index of Hospitals and Sanatoria with Tuberculosis Beds in the United States and Territories. This Index gives information as of April 1, 1954, about tuberculosis beds in the non-Federal and in the Federal hospitals, but does not include data on mental hospitals or on penal institutions other than Federal penitentiaries.

For convenience, a comparison is made here of the data received on the April 1, 1953 and April 1, 1954 bed census questionnaires.

Federal and Non-Federal Tuberculosis Beds

United States and Territories

	1953	1954
Rated Capacity	114,479	115,157
Beds Occupied	100,227	97,991

The net increase in rated capacity is only slightly more than one-half of 1 percent. This results from a net increase in the number of Federal beds of 5.2 percent and a net decrease in the number of non-Federal beds of less than one-half of 1 percent.

The decline in the number of beds occupied is 2.2 percent.^{1/} There was an increase in Federal beds occupied of 4.4 percent, but a decrease in non-Federal beds occupied of between 3 percent and 4 percent.

Additional information on the changes which have occurred between the dates of the two surveys are explained in subsequent paragraphs under the Non-Federal and the Federal sections of this Index.

Non-Federal Hospitals

The non-Federal hospitals are those owned and operated by:

States

Local Governments (City, County, District)

Other (Private, eleemosynary, and non-profit organizations)

^{1/} Because of a change in the reporting system of one of the agencies, this percentage decline in the number of beds occupied is slightly overestimated; the percentage increase in the number of Federal beds occupied is underestimated.

The data presented for this group of hospitals were obtained through a survey made by means of a post card questionnaire which was mailed during April 1954, to each of about 1,000 hospitals. Ninety-nine percent of these replied. The few hospitals which did not reply to either the questionnaire or to repeated correspondence, are listed in this Index with the number of tuberculosis beds which they had on April 1, 1953, providing these data were available. A footnote explains this wherever it occurs.

Tuberculosis Beds in Non-Federal Hospitals (Official Rated Capacity)

Between the dates of the two surveys (April 1, 1953 and April 1, 1954) there was a net decline in the number of tuberculosis beds in the non-Federal hospitals in the United States and Territories of about 400 beds.

Even though ten new hospitals with assigned tuberculosis beds were completed, adding almost 2,200 beds, and an additional 100 or more hospitals increased their rated capacities to accommodate another 1,700 patients, these did not offset the decrease in total rated capacity which occurred through closed hospitals and closed tuberculosis units, totaling about 1,800 beds, plus the drop in the capacities of more than 100 hospitals, which amounted to another 2,500 beds. It should be noted that some of the new construction represents replacement of unsuitable facilities rather than additional facilities.

The non-Federal hospitals in the continental United States accounted for about 83 percent of all tuberculosis beds and 81 percent of the tuberculosis patients hospitalized (table I). There were more than 5 times as many tuberculosis patients in tuberculosis hospitals as there were in other hospitals with tuberculosis units.

The number of tuberculosis beds (official rated capacity) of the non-Federal hospitals in the United States and Territories totaled 95,198, but approximately 4.5 percent of these beds were not available for use on April 1, 1954, and 12.3 percent (more than 11,000) of the total number of beds which were available to patients were vacant (table II).

Hospitals were not queried as to the reasons why beds within the rated capacity of the institution were not kept available for tuberculosis patients. However, some hospitals did volunteer this information. Some reported that lack of trained tuberculosis personnel, including physicians, nurses, and technicians, resulted in the closure of beds. Other hospitals attributed the closings to lack of funds, and to a decrease in the need for beds. It is clear, however, that any decrease in need for tuberculosis beds is a local occurrence and is not a reflection, as yet, of the general situation.

In many places it is apparent that a serious tuberculosis bed shortage still exists. A hospital in one State attributes the conversion of a 16-bed tuberculosis unit to another use to the marked decline in the tuberculosis death rate in the State in the last four years. However, reports from other areas in this same State indicate that there are several thousand tuberculosis patients in the State who should be hospitalized but for whom no beds are available.

A private hospital in another State gave as a reason for the closing of beds, that private institutions were experiencing a decrease in the number of applications because of the new State sanatoria recently opened, while another hospital located in this same State (but not in the same area), indicated that it has a waiting list and that drugs are being administered by some physicians while patients await State hospitalization. Statements from two of the new State sanatoria show that more than 200 patients are awaiting hospitalization. From hospitals in over a quarter of the remaining States, the volunteered reports indicate that patients are forced to wait for hospital beds.

Non-Federal Beds Available

Between April 1, 1953 and April 1, 1954 there was a net decline of about 850 in the number of available beds in the non-Federal hospitals in the United States and Territories. In the continental United States the number of available non-Federal beds declined by about 1,080, while the hospitals in the Territories experienced an increase of approximately 230 beds during this same period.

The proportion of the rated tuberculosis bed capacity actually available for use varied from 69.8 percent in Mississippi to 100 percent for Arkansas, Colorado, District of Columbia, Kansas, Louisiana, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, South Dakota, Vermont, Wyoming, and Alaska, and 100.9 percent for Alabama. Forty-five States and the three Territories had 85 percent or more of their rated bed capacity available for use on April 1, 1954.

Non-Federal Beds Occupied

The net decline in the number of patients occupying beds in the non-Federal hospitals in the United States and Territories amounted to about 3,000 or between 3 and 4 percent. In the continental United States alone the number of patients in non-Federal hospitals was 75,951, or about 3,200 (4 percent) less than the number of patients who were occupying beds on this same date one year previous. In the hospitals in the Territories, the number of patients hospitalized increased by about 200.

Federal Hospitals

The Federal hospitals are those operated by the Federal Government. Included in this group are hospitals controlled by:

Army
Navy
Air Force
Public Health Service

Veterans Administration
Bureau of Indian Affairs
Federal Bureau of Prisons

All data about Federal hospitals were obtained from the responsible agencies.

The Army and Navy hospitals listed in this Index are those which have special facilities for the care of tuberculosis patients. There are other armed forces hospitals in which some beds are occupied by tuberculosis patients, but these hospitals are not listed because the respective services do not consider them permanent tuberculosis facilities.

Previous to this edition there were no Air Force hospitals with facilities for the care of tuberculosis patients. Such patients occupied beds in other armed forces hospitals. Recently, however, the Air Force has set up tuberculosis beds for the use of their personnel, and by April 1, 1954, about 180 beds had been set aside at the Parks Air Force Base, Pleasanton, California, for the care of tuberculosis patients.

There are 7 United States Public Health Service General Hospitals which had a tuberculosis service on April 1, 1954. These and the one tuberculosis hospital which is located at Manhattan Beach, New York, are listed in this Index. The Public Health Service hospitals which do not operate a separate tuberculosis service, and therefore do not report the number of tuberculosis beds available, have been omitted although there are usually a few tuberculosis patients in these hospitals.

All Veterans Administration hospitals which had operating tuberculosis beds on March 31, 1954 are listed. The operating beds have once again been reported by type of bed section, rather than by type of patient, and the number of tuberculosis patients hospitalized is therefore under-reported. In addition, there were about 1,500 beds in the surgical and physical medicine rehabilitation wards which were occupied by tuberculosis patients on March 31, 1954, but which have not been reported as operating tuberculosis beds, because of the method of reporting mentioned.

In the 1953 edition of the Index, 129 Federal hospitals, with 18,921 tuberculosis beds, were listed for the United States and Territories. In the present issue, there are 132 hospitals, 129 of which have a specific number of beds totaling 19,959.

More than 91 percent of all Federal beds were in use on April 1, 1954 and there were about 800^{1/} more patients hospitalized in Federal institutions on this date than on the same date a year ago.
